

CDR Assessment Group, Inc. Announces NEW Individualized Interview Reports Based on Character, Risk & Motivational Assessment Results

Employers can now predict how candidates will actually show up on the job by digging deeper into their individual strengths, needs and risk factors or dark sides with CDR's interview questions.

SUGAR LAND, Texas (PRWEB) July 17, 2018 -- CDR Assessment Group, Inc. leads the way, once again, with innovative tools for identifying and developing talent. CDR announces their latest new assessment tool, the CDR 3-D Suite Interview Reports. These savvy new interview reports provide specific questions developed based on one's individual results on the Character, Risk and Drivers & Rewards Assessments.

Nancy Parsons president of CDR Assessment Group, Inc., asks, "Are your interview questions the same for each candidate?" She explains, "They shouldn't be. Obviously, there are some standard questions for all candidates. Beyond that, it is crucial to differentiate essential candidate strengths, risks and motivational facets. With these new CDR Interview Reports, no longer will hiring managers or executive coaches be fooled or miss the mark during key interviews."

"CDR Assessments get past insights that can be observed or picked up by normal interactions, including the dark sides of personality, and now with the CDR Interview Reports, interviewers can reveal how behaviors will actually manifest once the honeymoon is over. In other words, interviewers will be able to see how the person will really show up and perform, getting past typical superficial interview rhetoric and potentially embellished resumes. When used by executive coaches, CDR's interview reports help them prepare for focused, purposeful questions to get at the core and underlying traits to accelerate development and success for their clients," says Parsons.
